

Julian becomes model for Mall Giant

It is clear, Sam (Stads, Spalding, Ollie) Julian is on a mission to pull off the trifecta this year. From his palatial mansion in Louisville, KY, Julian said, "I plan on winning the Wing Contest, Redneck golfer of the year, and Best Redneck in a Speedo".

From the looks of his recent Glamour shots session, one can only conclude Julian is serious after donning the cover of the Titan of Photography's recent March issue.

Spalding said, "The wing contest will be no problem since we all know Waring can't hold his Miller Lite. When you eliminate him, you take out the field. I plan on coming down for a few lessons with Jailbait (Williams), which should solidify the swing, and the Speedo contest? Let's just say Julian 2.0 will be in full effect for Myrtle".

Jailbait Williams said, "Sam is one of those rare students you come across that has it all. Strength, speed, flexibility, and has the ability to quickly apply whatever concept you teach him. He is the Lex Luger of golf".

If Spalding can eliminate the 2-3 blow up holes per round, this may be his year? With one month to go, it appears he is the man to beat for the moment

Collier Faces Identity Crisis

Rodney “Sprinkles, Captain Hook” Collier has always been a man who is comfortable in his own skin. With a tough exterior few men can exude, Collier seems at a major crossroad in life: Four-wheel drive Truck or Mini-Cooper?

The obvious decision for most men would be to stay with the truck simply because of the image it conjures, but we all know Sprinkles beats to a different drum.

Collier, in typical Saskatchewan drawl said, “I am not sure what to do right now? The car is fun to drive and in Colorado, the metro image is more acceptable. I think in Tennessee there is stigma for guys that drive effeminate cars, but here, it just seems normal”.

When asked if he might also consider a toy dog purchase to go along with the car Sprinkles said, “It would complete the look but I’m afraid my lease doesn’t allow pets and when I think about it, I wouldn’t want the Cooper ruined with dog sprinkle”.

Tour President “Mario” Sponcia did some research on the subject and did find a VERY outdated article on gaylife.com that proclaimed in 2006 that the Mini-cooper was the best “twinkmobile” of the year (whatever that means?), but one would assume five years later, the stigma would surely be gone? Sponcia dug a little deeper and found that nymag.com named the Mini-Cooper the 4th best gay car of the year and Stuart Poole of Fuse magazine called it his “Top Queer” ride in the April 2011 issue!

Vanity Fair writer Brett Berk seemed to write the fairest assessment on the Mini (and one the Redneck tour endorses) in his article, “Why the Mini-Cooper is Stray, not Gay”, when he said, “Well, sorry to disappoint, but here’s the big, hard, throbbing truth: Mini Coopers are not gay. In fact, I would like to posit that Minis are more like ATVs—juvenile boy-toys, but for straight guys who aren’t rednecks. My proof? Both vehicles have ultra-quick steering. Both are approximately the same size and shape. Both are driven out of a geeky desire for individuality and freedom—Mine’s yellow and white! Mine has a rebel flag on it!”

Too bad Sprinkles is flying into Tennessee instead of driving, we at the tour believe the Mini-Cooper would have made quite the statement.

Wing Contest to tighten the dead carcass of chicken remains.

Julian said, "Just like a fighter, you can't punch yourself out too early. An hour and a half is like a fifteen round fight. You have to pace yourself or be knocked out!"

The rules have been slightly tweaked this year to give lesser contestants a shot at the title. Some last year inaccurately claimed it was a "beer drinking contest", but that issue has been put to rest with the additional bonus points given for the increased heat index option.

After literally blowing what seemed to be an insurmountable lead in the first annual Redneck Wing Contest, Mark "Vesuvius" Waring has vowed to embarrass Sam "Spalding" Julian and any other competitor that dares to go toe to toe with the aging giant.

Waring said, "Honestly, I underestimated the rotund one. He looks so unassuming but I learned real quick, inside beats the heart of a grizzled All-You-Can-Eat Veteran.

How was Spalding able to take down the perpetually single Goliath? The answer can be found by observing the Boa Constrictor in any Pet Store USA. Just like the lithe reptile, Julian devours each morsel one bite at a time with the unhurried pace of a tortoise, and pushes it down his multi-chambered stomach until only

2011 Rules/Point Breakdown:

1. Contest runs for 1:30.
2. If the winning contestant pukes before 12:00 Midnight, the next contestant wins.
3. Naked Wings are worth 1 point.
4. Battered Wings are worth 1.5 points.
5. Beers are worth 2.5 points.
6. The minimum heat index for the contest is HOT.
7. Bonus points will be awarded for eating 3 mile sauce (8 points) and 911 sauce (12 points).
8. Half point final totals will be rounded up to the next full point.
9. Highest combination of points wins.

Calendar

June 1st, 2011

Heritage Golf Club

June 2nd, 2011

Caledonia Golf Club

June 3rd, 2011

TPC of Myrtle Beach

June 4th, 2011

True Blue

PLAYER PROFILE: CHRIS "ADMIRAL, SPUD" SAMULSKI

One of the most anticipated debut's in Redneck history will come this June when the shortest and worst golfer to ever tee it up joins the tour. Many Rednecks worried about the void Erik "Chernobyl" Scott left when he could not make the trip this year, but Admiral Samulski promises to bring hours of bad footage to the season ending Redneck DVD. One of the toughest decisions with this new addition has been the sleeping arrangements, Since Spud joined and served our country during "don't ask, don't tell". Since Spalding Julian is already spoken for, the most logical choice may be Sprinkles Collier...who has never told. Welcome Chris!