

Tour to release limited edition beer Koozies

The goal of the Redneck tour has always been to provide males over twenty-two, with disposable income, not going through a divorce, job change, mid-life crisis or new baby, the best week of their year.

“Hot” Rod Collier has been the unspoken Mendoza line for many years...and to commemorate the 2015 edition, the tour has decided to issue limited edition Koozies. For a nominal $11, each Redneck will receive not one, but two, limited edition Redneck tour Koozies.

There was a huge internal debate at the tour headquarters: Can or bottle. Bottle is more versatile for beer, but Can Koozies are the favorite for every day use. The deciding factor came down to Commie beer. Since Commie beer is only sold in bottles, growlers, or dirty taps by bearded hippies with multiple degrees standing on concrete floors with queer bands playing in the background, the tour opted for the Can version.

Why Myrtle every year?

Some people ask, “why do you always go to Myrtle”?

1. Variety - Go to Hilton Head, Pinehurst or some blue-hair haven in Floriduh and tell me how many courses of Myrtles quality can you play within a 30 minute drive.
2. Cost - Hands down, Myrtle is the cost leader. Competition (sorry Communist Democrats) is good. Flights are cheap too.
3. Drive time - From Knoxville, nothing is closer...or better for the money.
4. Replays - Myrtle is the only place I know that offers sensible replays after a morning 18, other destinations offer them for their own course but others? Clueless.
5. Dining options - literally hundreds
6. Golf shops - The discount shoe shop always has great deals. Martins (now the PGA Superstore) is just plain amazing!

A few things to keep in mind...

- Tee times will be prominently posted before each day's play. In the old days, Rednecks had to depend on paper maps, then Mapquest...but since we all have phones with Maps on them, being late is NOT tolerable. Be on time.
- Slow play - Don't take a long time to hit a shitty shot. If you are playing bad, don't whine. You aren't that good anyway and no one gives a shit about your game any way, only theirs.
- Drinking - Drinking a lot is fine on the trip. Some are married to battle axes others pretend to be happy singles, either way, it's your vacation... just don't ruin anyone else's by being a jerk-drunk or you will be banned.
- Food - We usually pass by a Chick fil-a every morning. Some like to go to an actual breakfast place in the AM. Many are cheap and give you lots of food. Lunch is always at the course. Group dinners are preferred but the tour has loosened this considerably over the years. We usually eat at least one buffet and one nice meal per trip. Chains are expressly banned. You can eaten Outback and Olive Garden back home junior.
- Gambling - This is completely optional. We used to do a Redneck of the year tournament by handicapping random rounds but more have favored doing daily games for no more than $10.
- Clear your phone the night before so you can take pictures and videos. Having one guy take videos (Sponcia) is inconsiderate. The more video and pics, the better the complimentary DVD will be after the trip.
- Bring ear plugs. Many people snore.
- Feel free to play whatever tees you want, it's your vacation.
- Texas Hold em' is held at least 1-2 nights, bring extra money for it. Usually $20 buy in.

PLAYER PROFILE: "HOT" RODNEY COLLIER

Veteran Rodney Collier is no stranger to the Redneck tour. With a hook only an instructor would love, Hot Rod is poised to shoot in the mid-high 80's. Rod's deep Saskatchewan accent will have a few tour rookies baffled. Tour advice: Watch the movie " Fargo " a few times before coming and everything will be fine. On a positive note, Rod usually has a good short game and is a decent putter. Negatives? Known to take free cigars, beer, and will want to hit everyones clubs. Rod likes to claim he's poor, but with no dependents he is aware of, that excuse doesn't fly.
